

ABIGAIL PARKER – ALBANY, WESTERN AUSTRALIA

Abigail has been a frustrated artist since leaving High School. Retiring from full-time work (teaching and farming) finally gave her the chance to study Art, firstly at TAFE, and then through Open University. She is now rapidly developing her belated artistic career, primarily as a painter. Starting out with the watercolour-over-pencil technique, she has lately branched into oils as well.

Abigail's practise is centred firmly around Nature, and our world's catastrophic environmental problems. She is intensely concerned with highlighting the plight of our increasingly endangered native species. Her work is currently focused on the biodiversity of her local Albany region, particularly on our rare and endangered flora and fauna. Please see her website for details.

An active member of both the Albany Art Group and Albany Botanic Art Group, Abigail regularly exhibits with both, and sells her work locally, interstate, and internationally. She is also a member of ArtSouthWA, and the Botanical Art Society of Australia.

Abigail's artwork is available through selected art group exhibitions, or all year round through her website and from Albany Artisans Collective Gallery at 120 York Street, Albany, WA.

Website: <https://gailsqallery.weebly.com/>

Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/gailsegallery/>

